SPRINGFIELD MUTUAL
HEALTH INSURANCE COMPANY.
FRINGFIELD, MASS.
GEO. II. NORMAN, Agent.
THIS institution is conducted on the mutea principle, so far as to admit the parties insurto an equal participation in the profits of the company.
It insures to note and femble persons between the agen of filtera and femble persons between

It insures to mate and femile persons between the ages of filtent and fixty years, a residy income at the rate of 100 per cent, upon amounts garantly deposited; in cases of disquilification for business by reason of sixtuess or accident. For instance, a person paying 350 ages, insures to hindelf 85 (or 100 per cent.) for every work's illness within that year. These benefits are independent of whatever dividends may anomally access to the insured.

The rates of annual payments by the member

$2.00 per Annum, draws, $2.00 per week, 4 QU 6 UO

The main design of this company is to caubbe prudent and discreet persons of result incans, to make provision while in health, by a triding outley, against the aggressted sufferings that inevitably invades eight health, in seasons of peculiary trivation and of instituty to have. A vest amount of human wretchedness has been prevented or miligated, within the present generation, by the establishment, in Europe, of smillar provident institutions; and within a short period, this system of Health Laurance has been introduced into our own country, with results, thus fary equally beneficial to all whose relief it entemplates—more experiation at whom any interruption by sickness becomes a serious and distressing relamity.

By this system, also, one person may issue the health of another—a parent that of a ridill, or a child that of a prent—as employer that of a wikerun, or of an apprentice, See. Thus, those who ere table, by a finall immediate investment, may relief themselves from the hazard of incarring level themselves. 6'00' " man, or of an apprentice, Sec. Thus, those who ere table, by a small immediate investment may relieve themselves from the hazard of incarring heavy butthens, indicted involuntarily by those who might otherwise become dependents upon them for continued care and support.

While the most humans and kenevolent dispositions of mankind are subserved by every association of this description, its teneficiaries are exempted from being placed in the degraded condition of recipients of the businty officiaries. For, by the contract into which they enter, they purchase and fairly arm all the benefits which they may derivand, as a matter of just and legal right; and, if it so please Providence that they expuse the afficiency sines which they have measurably provided, the satisfactory election is left, that the price of their own immunity has been applied to the comfact and succor of their less formate fallowleings.

It is presumed that no extended argument can be required to recommend the objects of this Company to pail in consideration. I passed of the Rues and Regulations of gird by the Directory which may be had at my obeen, will adopt an apple insign into the principles of the Institution, and of its modes of operation.

THESDAY MORNING, MARCH 2, 1852

MR. WEBSTER'S ADDRESS DELIVERED SEFORE THE NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY Concluded.

When the last page of this learned eloquent and felicitous address lell from his hand, Mr. Webster stood silent for a moment, as if heshating whether, he should say more. There were evident expressions of desire and expectation that he would go on, and he contin-

. But, gentlemen, i will not take my But, gentlement, whill have the agency.—
We may trust that heaven will not forsize us so long as, we do not forsize lves. We must errengthen ourselves and gird up our loins with new resolution; we must counsel each other, and vowing to sustain each other in the support of the constitution, prepare to micer manifoldy and unitedly whatever fate may have in store for us. Are we of this generation so direlect? Have we so tittle of the blood of our revoluwe so thus of the monod of our revolu-tionary fathers coursing through our weins, that we cannot preserve what our ancestors achieved? In The world will ery out "spame" upon us if we show ourselves unworthy to be the descendants of those great and illustrious, men who lought for their liberty, and secured it to their posterity by the constitution.

Now, gentlemen, exigences will arise in the history of nations; when competition and rivalry, disputes and contentions are powerful. Reinenclass series. are powerful. Exigencies arise in which great men and good men of all parties, and all shades of political sentiment, are called upon to reconsider their opinions—to re-adjust their positions, opinions—to re-adjust their positions, and to bring themselves together, if they can, in the spirit of harmony.—Such a state of things, in my opinion, has happened in our day. An exigency has arisen. We have a great and has arisen. We have a great and wise emistitution. We have grown, flourished, and prospered under it with a degree of rapidity unequalled in the history of the world. Founded on the basis of equal civil rights, its provisions secure perfect equality and freedom to all; all who live under it are equal,—all enjoying the same privileges. In a enjoying the same privileges. In a case like ours, it is to be presumed, that all the wise and good men of the nation have the same end in view though they may wish to take different means btain that end-the preservation and protection of the constitution and Gov-If, then, they have the same object in view, they must pursue a concliating course, and each be willing to surrender course, and rach to secure the harmony of the whole! This general object then being the preservation of the constitution, the only efficient means to accommission to the constitution, the only efficient means to accommission to accommission of the constitution. friends. (Applause.) The constitution has enemies, secret and professed; but they cannot disguise the fact, that it sethey cannot auguese the fact, that it secures us many benefits. These enemies are unlike, in character, but they all have some fault to find. Some of them are enthusiasts, that headed, self-sufficiently. cient, and headstrong. They fancy that they can make out for themselves a better path than that laid down for them. Phæton the son of Apollo, thought he could find a better course across the heavens for the sun.

Thus Phaton once, smids the ethereal plains Leuped on his father; car and seized the reins; Far from his course impelled the glowing sun Till matere's laws to with disorder run

Other enemies there are, more cool and with more calculation. These have and with more calculation. a deeper, and more traitorous purpose; they have spoken of foreible resistance to the provisions of the constitution; they now speak of secession! Let me say now speak of secession: Let me say, gentlemen, secession from us is accession elsawhere. He who renounces the protection of the stars and stripes, shelters himself under the shadow of sunther flay, you may rest assured of that. (Sensition and analyse.) These malconstructions salion and applauce.) These malcon tents find it easy to inflame men's passions; they lay all misfortunes of indi-vidual men of individual states, of sections and communities - all want of pros-perty, to the Union. The co-operation of what are now called antagonist prinsiples is made serviceable in the endeavors to averthrow the constitution. Extremes meet and concert together .-Some there are, who in their own words, proless to hate the constitution because it folerates in the Southern states, the institutions existing there; some because it does not more energetically suislain the "peculiar intitution."

Both mettles are willing to overthrow eally sublain the "peculiar intitution."

Both parties are willing to overthrow the constitution, and concert their measures accordingly to accomplish their ends. Now to counteract the efforts of these malcontons, the friends of the constitution must raily—ALL its friends, of whatever section, whatever their sectional opinions may be, must unite for its preservation. They must forget the things which are behind, and act like at tional opinions muy be, must unite for its preservation. They must forget the things which are behind, and act like a band of brothers. They must forget the past, the little bickerings and trifling disagreements which have hitherto sep-erated them. They must look forward only to the future, and unite their efforts to preserve the bean bequiesthed to the only to the future, and unite their efforts to preserve the boon bequeathed to the world by those great men, their ancestors; they must gird up their loins to the work. I give my confidence, my countenance, my influence, heart and hand, to all those good and wise men, who are willing to stand by the constitution and acquiesce in the means necestion and acquiesce in the means neces-sary to maintain its priceless provisions, without reference to the past, or pledge for the luture.

I will quarrel with no man about past difference—I will object to the co-operation of no man. We stand here now upon a broad constitutional basis, and let us not in that spirit of union which actuated our ancestors when they framed the institutions we must concentrate carry my toleration so far as to justify a Benfard Mercury.

in the slightest degree may defection from the principles of the Union. The great point at stake is its preveryation.

I cannot hesitate in moment on this question, nor het well and harmoniously with those who do, ... Other questions ques-tions of policy—are subordinate, this is faramount. Every man who is attachraramount. Every man who is attached to the Union should come out boldly and say so, without conditions and hypotheses, and its, and ande, and, buts. Chaughter, What says Cleero Plen-ique inscriptum sit, plates conscription fronte cujusque civis, quod de has re-sentiat." Let every man bear inscribed on his forchead, what he is, and what he means to do in that matter.

There are persons, weak enough foolish enough to think, to believe, and to say that if the constitution which holds these states together should be broken up, there would be found other new and better chains to bind them.— This is rash! This is rash! I no more believe, looking at the thirty one states which compare this Union covering so vast a country-embracing so many climates—se many mountains— so many rivers—I no more believe if and the state of t compose the universe should rush into illimitable space, jostling against each other, that they could be brought back and re-adjusted into barmony by a new and re-adjusted into harmony by a new principle of attraction. [Applause.] Gentlemen, I hardly know if it would be an aggravation or an alleviation of fate. We can die no linguing death; we cannot fall victims to war, pestilence or famine: sa cartiquake alone can throw down the pillars of our state, and bury us in eternal political ruin and the darkness of everlasting night. Such may be the late of this country, but may have live to see the day. May I not may be the late of this country, but may I never live to see the day. May I not survive to hear any apocalyptic angel erying through the heavens. Epsem epsem Amerika he megale kai egentlo kaloiketerion daimonion, kai phalaks pantos pneumatos akatharlow. Gentlemen, a most ausmicious americante. men, a most auspicious omen salutes men, a most auspices of the state and cheer us this day. This day is the anniversary of the birth of Washington. Washington's birthday is celebrated from one end of this land to the other.—The whole atmosphere of the country is this day redolent of his principles—the hills, the rocks, the groves, the vales, and the rivers, shout their praises and resound with his fame. All the good, whether learned or unlearned, high or low, rich or poor, feel this day that there is one treasure common to them all, and that is the fame of Washington. They nat is the lame of washington. They all recount his deeds, ponder over his liable to explode at any time, the soon principles and teachings, and resolve to er the public understand their quality the future. To the old and the young, to all born in this land, and to all whose to all born in this land, and to all whose preferences have led them to make it the home of their adoption, Washington is an exhibitating theme. Americans are proud of his character; all exites from loveling inherence are income. proud of his character; all exiles from loreign shores are leager to participate in admiration of him; and it is true that he is this day here, everywhere, all over the world, more an object of regard than on any former day since his birth. (Cheers.)

Gentleman he his crample and it is the guidance of his procepts, will we and our children uphold the constitution. Upon his military lendership our lathers conquered their uncient enemies, and ers conquered their uncient suemies, and under the outspread banner of his politi-cal and constitutional principles will we can and consumuonal principles will we conquer now. To that standard we shall address and uphold it through evil report and good report. At the conclusion of this address, the audience rose en marse, the gentlemen giving nine hearty cheers, and the ladies waving their handkerchiefs, all sharing some chandlers are in the habit of mixin the expression of enthusiasm. Ex-Chief Justice Jones, rising to offer the usual resolution, " that the thanks of this paper. society be presented to the Hon. Duniel Webster for the very able address which has just been read, and that a copy be requested for the archives," said that he could not reltain from attempting to express the deep obligation which the society were under to the orator of the evening for the high gratification he had

Charles O'Conor, Esq., tose to second the resolution. He could add nothing to what had been said by the venerable Chief Justice, except to testify his individual respect for the orator who had eaid so much to the honor of the city of New York, and to the honor of the country of which he is the most distinguished citizen. He advocated the resolution, not mercly that the members of the reciety might testily to the people of all the world, the respect which we know that they also feel for the greatest states man of his country, but in order that this authentic specimen of the grandeur of his intellect, the depth of his research the vastness of his acquirements, might be preserved, and enable future historians to show the power and greatness of Daniel Webster.

These remarks were highly applanded. The resolution was then adopted nem. con., and after a benediction had heen pronnunced by the Rev. Dr. Wainwright, the assemblage withdrew, bearing with them the unperishable remembrance of one of the noblest intellectual efforts known in modern times.
